FACING MURDER CHARGE, BIEVER WAIVES HEARING

Hagerstown Man To Face Two Charges In November; Murder Count Dismissed.

J. Donald Bieber, Hagerstown, was arrested Saturday evening by Hagerstown police, upon a warrant delivered by Constable Charles Wilson and Sergeant Joseph Merrifield, of the local sub-station of the state police, charged with murder.

This morning a compromise arrangement was made with District Attorney John P. Butt, by Bieber's attorneys, J. C. Grice, of Hagerstown, and J. Donald Swope, Gettysburg, in which Bieber's attorneys, for their client, waived the hearing on the involuntary manslaughter charge, placed a $2,000 bail for Bieber's appearance at the November term of court here, and the murder charge, lodged against Bieber, was dismissed.

6-Months Postponement
Bieber, who was originally charged with involuntary manslaughter and driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, growing out of the fatal accident, last August, in which William A. Corbett was killed, secured a postponement of the preliminary hearing, September 12, when District Attorney John P. Butt failed to appear at the hearing before Justice Hill. The district attorney said he was called out of town on business and overlooked the date of the hearing. In his absence, Attorney Swope, representing Bieber, secured the postponement of the hearing until next March.

Prosecutor Butt sought to try Bieber at the November term of court but the adjournment, secured in his absence, prevented. District Attorney Butt then preferred a charge of murder against Bieber, traveling salesman, who, according to his attorneys, at the time of the September 12th hearing, was about to leave on an extended business trip that would keep him out of town for more than six months.

Trial Next Month
The warrant was delivered to Hagerstown police. On Saturday Bieber was arrested charged with murder.

This morning the compromise agreement was reached. District Attorney Butt said that he did not intend to try Bieber for murder, but was determined to try him on the involuntary manslaughter and drunken driving charge, at the November term of court.

Bieber's bail of $2,000 was furnished and the hearing on the original charge was waived. He will be tried next month in the local court.

More than 250 persons attended the third annual memorial service of the Adams County Firemen's association at the Majestic theatre, Sunday afternoon.

Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer, of the seminary, spoke on the subject, "Unselfish Service," citing many instances of persons giving their lives to save others. He said the service rendered by volunteer firemen typifies one of the highest forms of "unselfish service."

James B. Aumen, president of the county firemen's association, and others who participated in the program were the Rev. Father P. J. Enright, Bonneauville; the Rev. C. F. Catherman, Gettysburg; Mrs. Carrie Pretz, and a double quartet. The Rev. Father Mark Stock, of Gettysburg, who was to have taken part in the program, was prevented from doing so by a severe cold.

Silver Service Owned By Gettys Family, Founder of Gettysburg, Still in Use

During the three days' battles at Gettysburg, when the Blue and Grey were engaged in bitter conflict, for a cause each deemed right, the family of John Gettys, founder of Gettysburg, was the proud possessor of a beautiful and valuable silver service.

Fearing the loss of the silver set or the possibility of its falling into the hands of the invading foe, the Gettys family buried the silver pieces.

For three days the battles continued. For a time it seemed that the town would fall into the hands of the Confederacy and the Union forces driven into the North.

When General Lee withdrew his forces and the work of caring for the dead and injured as well as the sick, was at its height, the Gettys family took an active part, temporarily forgetting the silver service buried deep into the ground near their home.

Some time later the service was recovered.

Today the beautiful service is in use by descendants of the Gettys family at Athens, Tennessee.

This information was received through four prominent residents of Athens, who were guests at the Hotel Gettysburg over the week-end.

The guests included: Mrs. R. D. Bayless, Miss Catherine Keith, Mrs. C. O. Forre and Mrs. Tola Sherman Walton, all of Athens.

The four Tennessee visitors, who are on a tour of northeastern states, declared that the Gettysburg battlefields and the National cemetery are the most beautiful and inspiring they visited during the tour.

From Athens, Tennessee, they toured through Virginia, Maryland, visiting the national capital, into New Jersey and New York. In New York City they were entertained by the University of Tennessee, Alumni club. From there they motored into Connecticut and Massachusetts, returning into Pennsylvania and to Gettysburg.

At the Hotel Gettysburg they were guests, at an informal dinner, of the manager, Henry M. Scharf. They left Gettysburg Sunday for Roanoke.

Poor Shirley, How Did She Know They Weren't Good?

All biscuits look alike to little Shirley Larkin, year and a half old daughter of Prof. and Mrs. George R. Larkin, Baltimore street. So how was she to know that the innocent-looking cracker which she found on the floor was not like any other she had eaten?

After eating part of the biscuit, however, little Shirley developed an "awful" stomach ache, and became quite ill. Dr. C. G. Crist was summoned and admitted emetics after which Shirley felt better. Today she was as lively as ever.

The cracker which the child ate was a forgotten rat biscuit.

Bullets and High Lose; Frosh and Academy Win

Villanova Ekes Out 7 To 2 Victory Over Orange And Blue; Maroon And White Tumbles Before Shippensburg; Frosh Trim Dickinson And Prep Wallops Huntingdon High.

The Gettysburg college Bullets lost to the powerful Villanova aggregation, at the Lancaster Pike stadium, Saturday, 7 to 2, but they flashed a brand of football that startled the eastern grid critics and brought 12,000 spectators to their feet, time and again. That the Bullets did not trim the Stuhldreher-coached aggregation is a sad story. They failed to put over the big wallop when a grand punch would have reversed the tallies, or increased the count for the Orange and Blue.

While the Bullets were losing, the G-burg yearlings administered a 13-0 drubbing to the Dickinson Frosh; the high school tribe lost to Shippensburg and the Gettysburg academy won its fourth straight battle, defeating the Huntingdon high eleven, 19 to 0.

Bullets Fighting Hard

For every one of the sixty minutes of play, the Gettysburg lads fought the Wildcats with all they had, failing by inches to score a touchdown, and probably tying the score, and playing an all-around game fully equal to that played by Villanova.

It was only the super work of Melanson, for the Blue and White, in crashing the Orange and Blue line, that won for Villanova. Time and again the burly Villanova Kline's car crashed into the machine of C. Delbert Miller, which was parked in front of the grocery store of his father, Charles Miller, Midway. Kline was thrown out of his car by the impact. Both machines were damaged.

WOMEN CHOOSE TO FACE TRIAL

Myrtle Moose And Mrs. Reinhardt Elect To Stand Trial Rather Than Leave Town.

Given the choice of their freedom with the provision that they leave town within 24 hours or of remaining in jail to face charges as lewd women, Myrtle Moose and Mrs. Jacob Reinhardt, York street, today elected the latter course, claiming their arrest on Friday evening was "framed" by local officers.

The women were arrested near here late Friday evening by Officers George Aughinbaugh and Paul B. Shealer and Corporal T. N. Boate, of the state highway motor patrol, and lodged in jail to await action by District Attorney John P. Butt.

This morning, Mr. Butt gave the prisoners the choice of their freedom, with the admonition that they leave Gettysburg within 24 hours and never return or of remaining in custody to face the criminal charges.

According to information from the jail, the women refused to take their freedom, and they are said to have employed an attorney to fight the charges which the prosecutor said he would have sworn out against them.

The arresting officers today had no comment to make on the women's statement that their arrest was "framed."

For the first time in many years, no evening entertainments are planned for the seventy-fourth annual sessions of the Adams county teachers' institute to be held at the Gettysburg high school, November 12 to 16, inclusive.

In announcing plans for the institute, W. Raymond Shank, county superintendent of schools, said a lack of interest on the part of teachers and the public in the evening entertainments prompted him to discontinue them this year as an experiment.

School Directors Meet
Another innovation of institute this fall will be a one-day convention of school directors of Adams county to be held Wednesday, November 14.

Enrollment of teachers will begin Saturday, November 10, at the office of the county superintendent. Teachers must be enrolled before noon, November 12. The enrollment fee is $3, and the school code provides that teachers shall receive $4 a day for attendance at the sessions. Without a valid excuse, teachers will be fined $4 a day for non-attendance.

The directors will receive $4 a day and mileage for attendance at their one-day convention. After meeting with the teachers at the high school at 9 o'clock, the directors will go to the court house for a program arranged by the executive committee. At 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the directors and teachers will assemble at the high school.

Stalcup, assistant professor of educational sociology, New York university; Dr. Frank H. Kramer, Gettysburg college; Miss Helena McCray, supervisor of health and physical education, department of public instruction, Harrisburg; Dr. Robert C. Maurer and Officer George Aughinbaugh on a charge of desertion and non-support. The charge was preferred by his wife, Mrs. Alice Stape, Philadelphia, the warrant being sent to the state police. Stape was committed to jail to await Philadelphia authorities.

S. S. Richards, Clarksburg, West Virginia; Edward Millhan, Renovo, and William Waddle, Gettysburg, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct were arrested over the week-end by Officers George Aughinbaugh and Paul B. Shealer. They were committed to jail.

Richards was given ten days in jail by Justice J. L. Hill and Millhan was released on the payment of a fine and costs. Waddle's case has not yet been disposed of. John Shiley, Harrisburg, charged with panhandling, was arrested by Officer Shealer and committed to jail. His trial is pending.

Is This Why?

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 22, 1928.
To The Editor,
The Gettysburg Times.

Sir:
I read with interest the letter published in your paper last Friday evening and signed "A Curious One." Saturday evening's edition should have contained a statement from some one in the major parties with authority to speak. Perhaps this "political apathy" can be explained in this way—The Republican committee need not work, because other agencies are doing their work for them and the Democratic committee is in harmony with the program.

AUTO THIEVES GET CAR HERE OVER WEEK-END

Break Into Private Garage; Two Attempts To Steal Other Cars Unsuccessful.

Automobile and tire thieves were busy in Gettysburg last night.

The cream-colored coupe of William R. Fissel, Baltimore street, was stolen from a private garage of the Central Auto company, York street, after 1 o'clock this morning.

The automobile thieves forced the lock on the door of the garage which faces on Race Horse alley. The machine was unlocked.

Previously, the thieves unsuccessfully attempted to take the new coupe of A. C. Horrocks, Rex apartments, from another of the private garages of the Central Auto company. They forced the lock on the door to gain entrance to the garage, but the lock on the machine foiled them in their attempt to steal the machine. Although the robbers broke the lock on the car and tampered with the ignition wires, they were unable to start the car.

Get New Tire
The same thieves which stole Fissel's car are believed to have taken a new spare tire from a tourist's machine which was parked at the rear of the Hotel Gettysburg, Sunday night. An attempt was made to steal this car by tampering with the wires, but the robbers were unsuccessful.

The theft of Fissel's machine was reported to the state police and motor patrol. The car bore Pennsylvania license plates, No. B99,085.

SIX INJURED IN MOTOR MISHAPS

One Machine Upsets And Four Suffer Suts And Bruises; Two Others Hurt.

Six persons were hurt in two automobile accidents on the Carlisle road between Cross Keys and York Springs, Sunday.

Four residents of Newport, Perry county, were injured when the automobile, in which they were traveling toward Hanover, upset on the Carlisle road, several miles south of York Springs, Sunday morning.

Mrs. Arthur E. Shaffer, the most seriously injured, suffered an injury to her right leg and a possible fracture of the shoulder. Her husband, their son and another woman in the machine were badly shaken up and suffered cuts and bruises. The four were taken to the Hanover General hospital in the Hanover ambulance, but were discharged later in the day.

The cause of the machine upsetting has not been learned. The machine was wrecked.

Oscar Kinneman, Hanover barber, and his daughter, Charlotte, were injured, neither seriously, when the machine Mr. Kinneman was driving was forced from the Carlisle pike, Sunday morning, and upset. Mr. Kinneman was bruised about the body and his daughter had an injury to her nose. Their car was badly damaged.

DAVID M. CRIST SHOT TO DEATH EARLY SUNDAY

Former Gettysburg Merchant Killed by Unknown Assassin in Maryland.

David M. Crist, 45, proprietor of a general store at Walkersville, formerly part owner of a battery shop on Chambersburg street here, and former Gettysburg health officer, was shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was about to enter his home early Sunday morning.

It is believed the murderer lay in wait for his victim to rob him and after shooting fled before attempting to find any valuables.

Police Without Clues
About $100, the receipts of the day's business, was found in Mr. Crist's pocket. The authorities have no clue that might lead to the identity of the murderer.

The tragedy, one of the most mysterious in the history of Walkersville, has aroused the entire community. Mr. Crist closed his store a few minutes before Saturday midnight and went home, a few blocks away, in an automobile with Carl Zimmerman, a friend.

Shot Rings Out

The car stopped in front of the Crist home on the state road and the merchant got out and started toward the house, Zimmerman, in the meantime, leaving for his home.

As Crist was walking around his home preparatory to entering a back door, his assassin stepped from a honeysuckle vine and fired point-blank at his chest. With his heart pierced by a bullet, Crist was heard to shout, "Why did you do this?"

Neighbors Hear Shot
Aroused by the report of the pistol, several neighbors found Mr. Crist lying dead in front of his door. Dr. John H. Nicodemus, one of the first to arrive, said death was almost instantaneous.

Sheriff William C. Roderick, state's attorney William M. Storm and Magistrate Sherman P. Bowers, of Maryland, viewed the body and decided an inquest was unnecessary.

Graduate of College

Crist was graduated from Gettysburg college with the class of 1910. For a number of years he and Thomas Plank conducted a battery shop on Chambersburg street in the room now occupied by the "Hot Dog" restaurant.

About eight years ago, he returned to Walkersville, and entered the general store business. He was doing nicely, and had no known enemies.

He was married to Miss Blanche Bushman, sister of Leo Bushman, and daughter of William Bushman, near town. Mrs. Crist died three years ago.

William Bushman, Leo Bushman and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bushman, all of Gettysburg, went to Walkersville Sunday after being notified of the shooting. While at the Crist home, Mrs. Lewis Bushman found the empty shell from which the bullet which killed Mr. Crist was fired. The bullet was fired from a .25 calibre automatic revolver.

Mr. Crist is survived by one daughter, Miss Miriam Crist, 14 years old, at home, and one brother, Dr. G. Bruce Crist, of Frederick.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Walkersville Lutheran church, followed by interment in Evergreen cemetery here, beside the body of Mrs. Crist.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josepha C. Myers; a brother, Pemberton Myers, of Carlisle, and two sisters, Miss Leutitia Myers, Goodyear, and Mrs. F. T. Atkinson, Middletown. He was a member of Chestnut Grove Lutheran church.

All residents of Gettysburg and nearby towns who are now using or are considering the use of electric cooking and household appliances will be interested in public meetings to be held in the Hotel Gettysburg auditorium next Thursday afternoon and evening. At each of the meetings trained demonstrators will show the correct method of using electrical equipment in the home. A complete meal will be prepared—electrically—and at the close of the meeting free samples of the food will be distributed. The affair has been arranged by the Home Service department of the Metropolitan Edison company.

Police Fires Into Group Of Attackers And Wounds 2 Men

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—(AP)—Two men in a group stoning a policeman today in an effort to free a comrade, were shot, one being seriously wounded, when the policeman fired into the group. The trouble started when William J. Henderson, 29, the policeman, arrested a man in a lunch wagon.

Patients Witness Spectacular Fire

New York, Oct. 22.—(AP)—A spectacular fire within half a block of the Jamaica hospital today partially destroyed the three-story factory of a battery making plant in Richmond Hill. The loss was estimated at $500,000. Patients in the nearby hospital watched from beds and windows as chemicals used in the manufacture of storage batteries burned with brilliant effect for two hours.

Don'ts for Hunters

Don't forget to place your Resident Hunter's License certificate in your hunting clothes before you leave home. Be sure to counter-sign your license certificate. Your license is not good until it's signed.

Don't fail, while hunting, to wear your license tag in the middle of the back on the outer garment as prescribed by law.

Don't hunt on some other fellow's license. The fellow who loans you his license is, as well as yourself, violating the law, and the penalty is $20.00 apiece.

Don't exceed the bag limits on game animals and game birds. The fellow who exceeds the bag limits is cheating his fellow sportsmen; he is taking an ungentlemanly advantage of the hunter who plays fair.

Don't forget to respect the farmer's rights. Secure permission to hunt. Stay off posted land unless you have permission.

Don't carry off personal property on land where you are privileged to hunt. Hunters who fill their coats with apples, turnips, corn and nuts, without permission, do not help the farmer-hunter problem.

Don't forget to secure the license number of the hunter who destroys personal property or one who commits larceny of the farmer's crops. Turn this number in to your nearest game potter. Be sure to get the county number at the top as well as the license number at the bottom of the tag. If you can't secure either, then if the hunter has an automobile get his automobile license number.

Don't enter the primary or auxiliary game refuges with dog or gun. These sanctuaries belong to the sportsmen and are used to propagate large and small game. Land adjacent to the refuges, however, is open to legalized hunters in season.

Don't shoot within 150 yards of occupied buildings. It's against the law.

Don't hunt in crowds, and thereby avoid accidents. More than 70 per cent of the fatal and non-fatal accidents last year occurred while gunners were hunting small game.

Don't take a loaded shot gun into an automobile with you. Remove the shells first.

Don't climb over a fence with a loaded shot gun; remove the shells from the chambers and then get over, or lay the gun on the ground. Never pull a gun through the fence after you. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Don't shoot promiscuously while in the fields or woods; and never use a live tree as a target. Target practice, unless you have a substantial barracks constructed, is a menace to human life.

Don't gun on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The season for woodcock, grouse, ringneck pheasants, quail, bobwhite, black and gray squirrels and wild turkeys, opened October 15 and remains open until November 30, inclusive.

WILL RESTRICT WORKING HOURS OF BUS DRIVERS

Amendment To Motor Code Will Limit Time Drivers May Work.

Regulations and restrictions on large interstate passenger buses, plying daily through Gettysburg, are among amendments to the state motor code now being drafted for submission to the 1929 legislature at Harrisburg. Need for some of the amendments has been shown by the driver against reckless operation of the buses recently ordered by Governor Fisher.

A maximum limit of the hours of continuous duty by drivers of the buses will be one of the amendments proposed. Overworked drivers who fell asleep at the wheel have been responsible for several accidents in which interstate buses have figured in the last few months, and investigation shows some drivers have been at the wheel close to 24 hours in succession. The new provision will resemble the Adamson eight-hour law for railroad workers.

The State also plans to require drivers who operate interstate buses through Pennsylvania to hold a Pennsylvania driver's license. By this means the State will be better able to prevent irresponsible persons from driving buses laden with human lives, and the State will be in better position to enforce provisions of the reckless driving law against the speeding buses.

Another provision will require all motor vehicles operating as common carriers to make a full stop before crossing any railroad tracks. The present law requires such stops where a signal device or watchman warns of an approaching train, but makes no provision for stops at the thousands of unprotected grade crossings in the state. The public service commission by a general order has compelled all intra-state common carriers to stop at all grade crossings until certain the path is clear, but as the commission has no jurisdiction over interstate commerce, it has been unable to direct the through buses to stop at unmarked crossings.

Increase Registration Fees

While consideration has been given to proposals to increase registration fees for buses and heavy trucks, it appears more likely the through buses will be subjected to an excise tax. The tax is now planned on the basis of the Pennsylvania mileage traversed annually by the buses. Such a tax would make the out-of-state buses contribute to Pennsylvania road costs in proportion to the use they make of roads, and is considered a better tax plan than the gasoline tax, as the gasoline could be purchased across the state line in a state where the price of gasoline or the gasoline tax may be lower than in this state. Increased license fees are a possibility but the excise tax idea appeals strongly to some officials of the state administration.

Would Limit Speed

Because investigations by the motor patrol have shown some buses and many large trucks have been driving at speeds greatly in excess of the speed limit fixed by law, a proposal has been made that operation of the heavy vehicles be prohibited unless their engines contain a mechanical governor which makes it impossible to drive beyond the legal speed limit. Because of the belief that the adjustment of the governors could be changed immediately after state inspection, thus permitting excessive speed despite the governor, this provision has been sidetracked tentatively for the present. Highway officials appear confident that reduction of the high speeds of the heavy vehicles will shortly be accomplished through refusal of manufacturers of buses and heavy trucks to guarantee their vehicles if they are subjected to high speed for long periods.

DRIVE AGAINST SPEEDING BUSES HAS ITS EFFECT

Harrisburg, Oct. 22.—(AP)—Warning by the state highway patrol that excessive speeding by inter-state motor buses must stop has resulted in an appreciable decrease in violations, Captain W. G. Price, superintendent of the patrol, said today.

Another step which has resulted in compliance with the speed laws, Price said, was he citing of four bus drivers who were arrested three times within a week, to the state highway department for revocation of their driving licenses. The activities of the patrol in bus regulation were predicated on the order of Governor Fisher for a strict enforcement of the motor laws.

COLLECT GEMS IN LOST SHIP

Plane Which Crashed Last Thursday Carried Diamonds.

Franklin, Pa., Oct. 22.—(AP)—A postal inspector today was collecting diamonds which disappeared in a "rush" on the burned remains of the air mail plane in which a pilot fell to his death near Polk, Pa. The diamonds were part of the cargo in the plane.

The plane piloted by William C. Hopson crashed and burned Thursday night. W. L. Smith, superintendent of mails of the air transport company, salvaged part of the mail and what he thought was all of the diamonds and then announced that the plane had been abandoned.

Souvenir hunters found a few diamonds in the wreckage and the rush was on. One man scooped up earth near the plane which he took home and sifted to find four diamonds. Some skeptical persons sold their finds for $2 and $3 only to find they were worth $85 or more.

A postal inspector obtained a list of those reported to have found stones in the wreckage and started a thorough search, collecting most of the gems.

Notorious Bandit Sentenced To Die

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22.—(AP)—Paul Jaworski, slayer and notorious bandit who was at large for more than a year after his escape from the Allegheny county jail here, today was sentenced to die for killing a payroll guard. The date for his electrocution will be set by the governor.

Suffering from a bullet wound he received in a battle with Cleveland police who captured him several weeks ago, Jaworski was carried into court. He was composed and his only words were: "I have nothing to say."

The heavy guard was stationed in the court room and corridors to prevent any attempt to free the slayer.

The slayer's petition for a new trial made immediately after his conviction was denied.

BULLETS AND

Villanova score. It was Dorsey who played the big role in the attack which undid the Gettysburg cause, and finally culminated in his crossing the line which marked the end of the playing field, and a six-pointer for the Blue and White.

Gettysburg Opens Up

In the closing minutes of the game, with hope dying in the hearts of the Gettysburg supporters, but springing triumphant in the stout hearts of the eleven doughty warriors from the Orange and Blue college, the Bullets opened up an aerial attack which failed by a very narrow margin to bring victory to their cause.

Roche, who had replaced Hubbs, was the man whose arm catapulted Harry Stuhldreher to add a few gray hairs to his head.

The tall, dark-haired lad from Gettysburg, standing placidly with bared head behind the line of scrimmage, rammed pass after pass to the waiting arms of the forwards, but it was not to be. The fates had turned their thumbs down, and while that those passes should be incomplete. One of them, tossed to Cramer, who had sneaked out to the sideline unnoticed, flew straight as an arrow to its destination. But the fast-flying Cramer could not reach the oval in time, and the pigskin was just out of grasp. Crushed, with defeat staring them in the face, the Gettysburg team tried vainly to pull the game out of the fire.

Wildcats Fight Back

The Wildcats with the prey at bay, and blood on their fangs, smeared everything the Bullets offered, and stopped the flying lead pellets with an ironclad armor, getting the ball on an exchange of punts, and keeping it in Gettysburg ground for the last moments of the contest, after the Orange and Blue had gasped their last breath.

The lone two-pointer made by Gettysburg came in the second, when Slaughter fell on the ball behind the end zone after Miller, Gettysburg captain, had blocked Melanson's kick.

Snyder and Spangler played a great game for Gettysburg, and the Bullets' defeat cannot be attributed in the least to these two stocky battlers.

Shippensburg high sprung a big surprise on Saturday by giving the Maroon and White high school football team one of its worst defeats in years, the final score being 26-2. The visitors played a swift, accurate game and made use of every break in scoring their triumph.

Coach Martin's defense was unable to cope with the machine-like functioning of the Shippensburg team. Running behind an almost perfect interference on each play, the visiting backs advanced almost at will. Four and five men formed interference for nearly every rush and the locals' Maroon forward wall found it too powerful to break up.

Fumble Is Costly

Warren kicked to Shippensburg to open the game. After an exchange of punts, the visitors opened a drive on the Maroon 45 yard line and scored their first touchdown. With Sherman and Warden doing the heavy work, Shippensburg carried the ball to the 20 yard line. Wermick was injured in the scrimmage and was replaced by Reaser. Warden then took the ball and ran straight through the line and backfield for the first tally. Sherman's place kick was good for the extra point.

A Maroon fumble in midfield gave the Shippensburg team a chance to score in the second period. Using line plunges, Shippensburg gained a first down on the 33 yard line. On a criss-cross, Seitz romped 25 yards and Warden scored his second touchdown a second later on a double criss-cross. Again Sherman added the point.

A series of fumbles by both teams ended with the visitors again counting. After Hartman had recovered a fumble on the 25 yard line, Weikert dropped the pigskin after being tackled, Coleman scooping the ball up and running unmolested for the visitor's third score. The kick failed.

2 Points Donated

In an effort to stem the tide Coach Martin sent in Wilson, who has been on the injured list, in the second half, it being Wilson's first game since the New Cumberland tilt. Immediately after receiving the kickoff, the battlefield boys opened up with an aerial attack but on the first attempt, Seitz intercepted the pass and romped 25 yards for a touchdown. The kick was blocked.

In the final period the crowd was treated to one of those rare "Boners."

With the ball on their 40 yard line, Shippensburg punted, and it was partially blocked by the Maroon forward wall. However, Coleman recovered and in the mixup ran toward his goal line and downed the ball. On sensing his mistake he returned the ball to the 5 yard line before being tackled, but Referee Beck properly ruled it a safety for the locals.

In spite of their lightness, the Shippensburg clan found it rather easy to penetrate the Maroon defense. Shippensburg gained 7 first downs, while the Maroons made but 2. In 8 attempted passes, four worked for the visitors, while the Maroons failed in all of their four attempts.

Scoreless Tie

Mount St. Mary's college and Lebanon Valley battled to a scoreless tie in their annual football game at Emmitsburg, Saturday. A large crowd viewed the game which was played under ideal conditions.

The greater part of the game was a punting duel. Neither team was able to gain much ground. Anville visitors had an opportunity to tally late in the first half when a recovered fumble gave them the ball on the Mt. St. Mary's 10-yard line.

The Mounts held for downs on the 2-yard line and received the ball.

Academy Wins Again

The academy continued its winning streak by trouncing the Huntington high eleven 19 to 0. Davis smashed across the goal line from the 3-yard marker, after Davis had hurled a long pass to Kundrach.

The academy tallied 15 first downs and Huntington managed to register seven. The forward wall of the local outfit played an excellent game, opening wide gaps in the opposing line for the "pony" backs of G-burg to scamper through.

To Retire Young--Be a Champ

By HENRY L. FARRELL

HENRY FORD once said that a business man begins to attain his real earning and saving capacity when he had reached the age of 40 years. It is his theory that the skilled professional man and the shrewd commercial man who depends on his own efforts and does not have the stimulant of an inherited fortune behind him hardly can hope to attain a position of financial independence until he has passed the age of 50. In practical life among the millions whose lives are not bound by the hopeless walls of a shop or whose activities are not restricted by a merchandise counter or a row of clerks' desks, the age that promises liberation from labor and toil is placed even higher. The family doctor, the family lawyer and the merchant who furnishes the average household with the necessities of life will tell the head of the household that his ambition is to have enough money when he is about 60 to close up shop and go fishing or something for the rest of his days.

If this is the prospect of the successful business or professional man (and it is) what then of that business that makes it possible for a man to retire with half a million dollars or a million dollars before he is 45 years old? What kind of business is it that enables a young man of 30 to 35 years of age to retire with a cool million?

The answer is that it is the greatest business in the world and participation in professional sports has become the greatest business for quick returns on the least expenditure of time and capital in the world.

ONLY a few weeks ago, a young man just past 30, of sane mind and sound body, announced that he was resigning from a position that is worth in actual income more than one million dollars a year. He was secure in his position for at least two more years but said he is tired of it and wants to get away and enjoy himself as he sees fit.

Gene Tunney, a strange young man in everything he ever did, astounded a nation of working men when he said he had enough money to make him happy and that he was not interested in the two million dollars that might have been his if he had remained only nominally in possession of the world's heavyweight boxing championship.

"I have a fortune of a million dollars invested so that I can't consume the income," Tunney said. "My scale of living is comparatively modest and will not change with time. I am tired of the boxing profession and I want to get away where I can live as I choose."

Less than a year before that another young man of 33 gave up a profession that had made him more than a million and a half dollars and that was worth at least $100,000 a year to him.

Jack Dempsey, the former world's heavyweight champion, resigned from active participation in the glove flinging business when he was beaten the second time by Tunney.

"I have all the money I will ever need and I don't want to be punched goofy," Dempsey said. "I didn't have much opportunity to enjoy myself when I was a kid and now that I have the means I want to enjoy myself."

Dempsey, of course, didn't divorce himself as entirely from the business as Tunney did. As a former champion who still takes an active interest in boxing, Dempsey has a revenue from his name that would put a mechanic on the best street in town. But Dempsey turned down a half-million dollars that would have been his if he had returned to the ring this summer. There is talk now that he may come back next year, but his friends do not believe it.

THEN there is Benny Leonard, who retired several years ago as the lightweight champion of the world. He left the business with more than half a million dollars at the age of 32. Of course, it may be said that Leonard had to retire because he no longer could make 135 pounds for a fight. But that does not alter the fact that he was able to retire a very wealthy young man at an age when a young doctor or a young lawyer or banker is struggling for a start.

Fidel La Barba was just out of high school when he retired as the world's flyweight champion with enough money to put him through college and set him up in business. He has started a comeback, it is true, but when he retired he had more money than any other boy of his age in the world had ever made by his own unassisted efforts.

Professional boxing, of course, is what might be called a freak creation of the fates. It is something that the reformers say should not be and can't last, but it has spread its mantle of gold over hundreds and if it does not last it will leave its record as the greatest money producing profession of all time.

But boxing is not the only line of professional sport that rewards its artists with a flow of fortune.

The race track has furnished a number of young men with occupations that have made them independently wealthy.

Earlier in the season Earl Sande, ranked as one of the greatest jockeys ever produced on the American track, announced that this is his last season as a rider. A veteran of the track at the age of 32, Sande has saved and invested a fortune of a quarter of a million dollars, and decided he is in a position to quit work. He said he couldn't make the weight without imperiling his health and he wanted to enjoy himself and his money.

Sande might have made $50,000 a year for a number of years riding on foreign tracks where the weight impositions are not so heavy, but he said he wouldn't be happy in another country and he was getting "so old" he wanted to get some fun out of life. He probably will train horses on the American tracks at a fancy salary.

Pony McAttee and the Fator boys are riding to fortunes daily on the track. They already have a nice pile and when they get to be about 33 and get tired they also can quit and will not have to worry about the future.

BASEBALL also offers one of the best paid professions in the world. Ty Cobb is quitting this year as an old man of almost 45 with more than a million dollars. Tris Speaker is also giving up the business as a doddering veteran under 40 with not as much money as Cobb but with plenty not quit. He has an inordinate love of baseball but he can quit if the whim strikes him and he never will have to work again. Then there is the wrestling racket, which has passed almost out of the picture as a big money sport. Yet Joe Stecher has made more than half a million dollars out of it and "Strangler" Lewis is on what he says is a farewell tour as the champion. Lewis has more than half a million dollars and is ready to retire. He is about 40 years old.

The three or four good drawing cards among the wrestlers can travel around the country taking matches that do not always get even the dignity of a little notice in the papers, but the matches pay. Stecher says the title was worth $200,000 a year to him and it must be worth that much to Lewis.

TENNIS is supposed to be an amateur sport but even when the amateur rule is observed strictly it offers certain means of making fine money for the skilled players.

When the times comes for Helen Wills to retire she will be a wealthy young lady. She is in her early twenties now and should have at least six or seven years of tennis ahead of her. It is estimated that the revenue from her writings and drawings amounts to $25,000 a year and there can't be many more young girls her age who are making as much money as she is. Her living expenses are not high and the income from her side activities will increase as she gets older and more established as the greatest courtswoman of all times.

The young lady, if she retires or quits at the age of 30, should have at least $100,000. And this is real money for an amateur sport star.

Bobby Jones has an income of $25,000 or more from his literary work and he is strictly an amateur. The open golf championship is held to be worth from $100,000 to $150,000 a year but the star player usually does not get more than one year at it.

Bill Tilden has a fine revenue from his literary work. He turned down an offer of $100,000 to turn professional but it is possible that, in the long run, he will have made more money by remaining an amateur.

Charley Paddock, another enterprising amateur, announced after he had been beaten in the Olympic sprint races at Amsterdam that he is through as a runner. Paddock has made a lot of money in the theatre, on the lecture platform and in the movies and he can continue to capitalize on his name.

The track athletes, except in unusual cases like Paddock's, do not have the opportunities to capitalize on their reputations. Lloyd Hahn, one of the greatest middle distance runners ever developed in the United States, also announced his retirement in Amsterdam and said he would go back to his farm and get to work. Hahn was one of the rare rare amateurs. He has a house full of medals and trophies but they do not pay bills and he has realized little money from his running.

THE Gibbons brothers, Tom and Mike, left the boxing profession with plenty of money. They went into business in St. Paul and have become highly successful. Packey McFarland became a millionaire after he left the boxing ring and Jack Britton was set for life until the Florida windstorm came along and swept away his fortune.

It is rather strange to hear a youngster in his early twenties talking about retiring from business and settling down for life. But the young athletes today, most of whom are practical and sensible, do talk about it.

"In a couple more years I can retire and take it easy," Sammy Mandell, the young world's lightweight champion, said recently. "I want to go into some kind of business that will occupy my time. I am not going to speculate, however. Just some kind of business that will afford a good living. I have plenty of money but I want to keep putting the dividends back into the capital."

Jack Sharkey is another young man—not so long out of the navy—who has become wealthy in three or four years of fighting. Sharkey not only has commanded big purses in a number of fights but he has been tipped into some very fine investments. He should be worth more than half a million dollars in a few years.

There are any number of examples where less prominent athletes in their twenties have been able to command salaries of $10,000 to $15,000 a year and for youngsters under 30 that is real money.

IT is true that more than a few of these youngsters have had their heads turned by more than ordinary financial success and have squandered not too wisely what came to them out of the sport racket in the first years of their maturity. But it is also true that many of them have handled their funds with sagacity, knowing that Fame is a fickle jade and that the time to salt the coin is when it's rolling in generously.

Low Tender at the height of his ring career invested some of his income from the slugging game in a clothing store in Philadelphia and was often to be found selling shirts and ties to admiring customers there when not in training for a set-to in the squared circle.

Commercialized sport has opened a rich field to the young man, and in some cases, woman, who can perform with skill and color and for a chosen few has been, and still is, the royal road to face and fortune.

It used to be that boys wanted to go into the bond or brokerage business because of all the old fellows who retired with a million dollars seemed to come out of the financial profession.

But if professional sports continue to flourish the young men coming up now will hesitate to enter any business that cannot make a man wealthy until he is 45 years of age.

For the boys who can do it, the professional sport racket is THE one real business.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

American Desert.—There is an extensive desert in the territory of the United States, West of the Mississippi, which is described in Long's Expedition to the Rocky Mountains, 400 miles to the east and is 500 from north to south. There are deep ravines, in which the brooks and rivers meander, skirted by a few stunted trees, but all the elevated surface is a barren desert, covered with sand, gravel, pebbles, etc. There are a few plants, but nothing like a tree to be seen on these desolate plains and seldom is a living creature to be met with. The Platte, the Arkansas and other rivers flow through the dreary waste.

Spectator.

Married.—On Thursday evening last, by the Rev. W. O. Lumsdon, Esq., Esas Culp, to Miss Margaret Sutherland—both of this place.

On the 16th ult., by the Rev. J. Harvie, Isaac R. Smith, of Pittsburg (formerly of this place), to Miss Margaret Robinson, daughter of Samuel Robinson, near Wheeling, Va.

Military Chieftains.—Some persons allege that because General Jackson fought well for his country, he must be honest and faithful and make a good president.

But Benedict Arnold fought bravely for his country, and yet became a traitor.

Aaron Burr fought well, but afterwards conspired against the Union of his country.

Bolivar fought for Colombia, but is now destroying her liberty.

Cromwell fought for liberty, but afterwards betrayed it.

Wellington fought for England but now opposes the interests and liberties of the English people.

Napoleon fought for the liberty of France, but finally destroyed it.

Sylla fought for Rome, but afterwards marched an army into the city and massacred the people.

Marcus, of Rome, followed the example of Sylla.

Caesar followed in the same path.

It is madness to vote for a man merely because he fought with bravery and success. Even robbers and pirates do the same.

The Election.—The number of votes polled in this county at the late election falls short very considerably of what it might have been, and 500 less than have been polled heretofore. This is owing, in a great degree, to the opinion in the minds of our friends, that there existed no danger of the election of the Administration County Ticket—and little hope of carrying our congressmen. The majority is as great as is customary, in proportion to the vote polled—so that, notwithstanding the Jackson mania which appears to pervade Pennsylvania, our little county retains that steadiness of character for which she is proverbial. She cannot be fastened to the car of a "Military Chieftain." She will, we hope, for the honor of the county, on the 31st, record her vote, firmly and undauntingly, in favor of the candidate, in whose administration she sees everything done for the good of our common country—and in opposition to one, from whom we have nothing to gain and everything to lose. Let us show to the world, that "if Rome must fall, WE are innocent."

The friends of General Jackson have frequently expressed a great displeasure at his being styled a military chieftain. Facts show that his mind is of a military cast to a dangerous extent. In a letter to the secretary of war, he recommended drafting the militia to serve for and during the war; and in his letter to Major Humphries, of Philadelphia, he said the government ought to be damned for reducing the standing army at the end of the late war and that a republic like ours ought to have a standing army ten times as large as it then was. Frank Rep.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Gettysburg Railroad.—We understand that the vigorous efforts are about being made by the commissioners of the railroad to obtain the amount of stock necessary to complete it. About $25,000 now is required; and we trust that those who will, in the coming few weeks, canvass for stock, will meet with those ready and willing to a work, which all acknowledge will be of vital interest to the county. Let no one hold back, but give in proportion to his means and his interest—and the road will soon be made.

James J. Wilson, Esq., the commissioner chosen at the late election, was inducted to office on Wednesday last. His established reputation as a man of probity and intelligence gives full assurance that the interest of the county will be safe in his hands.

Mr. Aughinbaugh is re-appointed clerk.

Thanksgiving Day.—Governor Bigler has issued his proclamation appointing Thursday, the 25th of November, as a day of general Thanksgiving and Praise throughout the state.

The first snow of the season is falling this morning as our paper goes to press.

Married.—On the 18th inst., by the Rev. Mr. Rosenmiller, William Roof to Miss Susanna Snyder—both of this county.

On the same day by the same, Samuel Faber to Miss Anna Maria Spangler, both of this county.

A Female Barber.—Miss Caroline E. Putnam, of Salem, Massachusetts, has announced to the public that she has adopted the profession of a barber, and will take the beard of gentlemen's chins at the rate of 6 cents the mug.

(Ad.) For Sale or to Rent.—The Eagle hotel in Gettysburg, corner of West York street and West street. The house is 64 feet on West York street and 70 feet on West street, containing twenty-two rooms, is built of brick, in the most substantial manner. There is a washhouse 12 feet square, built of brick, with oven and smokehouse attached; a large frame stable on the back end of the lot. The lot is 64 feet front by 200 feet deep. There is a lot on West street, covered with stables, belonging to said property.

If this property is not sold, it will be to rent on the first of April, 1854. Persons wishing to see the property will please to call on Mrs. John L. Tate, who now occupies the same.

Mary Ann Greswold.
Died.—On the 15th inst., Henry Fisher, of this county, in the 87th year of his age.

At York, on the 13th inst., very suddenly, John Stahle, Esq.,

Just Folks

A FATHER'S DILEMMA

If one should ask for money, and I should answer "No,"
The money in my pocket wouldn't shout: "I want to go."
If one should come to my house and find upon my shelf
A certain book he fancied, which I wished to keep my self,
And I should say: "You're crazy! Give that book to you? Nay! Nay!"
The volume wouldn't turn about and ask to go away.
Yet "Give your daughter to me!" this rascal says to me.
"If you will let me have her, your son-in-law I'll be."
"What? Give away my daughter? The child I've loved so long? No! No! I'll never do it!" said I to make it strong.
And then a strange thing happened. My baby came to me
And whispered: "Let him have me. His wife I want to be."
And so I've up and done it! And so tonight I say,
The joys we hold the dearest we all must give away.
For howsoever we guard them the human race survives
Because our lovely daughters must some day all be wives.
And though a selfish father may tell a suitor "No!"
He'll find the child he's cherished with him will want to go.

(father of the editor of the Compiler), aged 58 years and 14 days.
On the 20th inst., near Mumbasburg, John Altland, aged 75 years, 8 months and 10 days.

A musical convention will be held at Harrisburg, Pa., during the second week in November next. Several eminent professors and vocalists from Boston are expected to be present.

The object of the convention seems to be to arouse a more general taste for music among the people of the interior of the state, to disseminate information with regard to the most approved methods of acquiring musical knowledge and skill, and to direct the attention of our interior population to the improvement of their musical taste. The convention will terminate in a grand concert.

AUTO ON RAILS

Montreal. (AP) — Inspection trips over the Canadian and Pacific lines will be made by engineers in a sedan model automobile designed for traveling on rails.

After spending two or three days at the Scarecrow's house, the little rabbit bid him and his wife good-by and continued on his journey of adventure. By and by, after a while and many a mile, he came to a cobbler's shop. And he came none too soon, for his boots were well worn and one of his toes was peeking through a hole in the leather.

Now the cobbler was sitting outside his shop, smoking a pipe, and when asked if he could make the bunny boy a pair of shoes, replied: "Yes indeed. In fact, if you'll make yourself comfortable while I take your measure, I'll recite an interesting tale, for I see you are a traveler and in search of adventure."

"One night," began the cobbler, "after a hard day's work, I left two pair of shoes cut out and ready to be sewn. But you can imagine my surprise in the morning when I looked for them to find that they had been neatly sewn, as well as heeled and toed. That night I again left two pair already cut out, and in the morning, lo and behold, they, too, were made up as nicely as you please."

"Who is this good friend," I asked myself, "who renders me such kindly aid?" and that night I crept softly down from my bedroom to the workshop. Would you believe it? Right there on my bench sat two little elves.

"Stitch, stitch, stitch!
And hammer here a peg,
Soon a shoe we'll have for Lou
And maybe one for Meg."

they sang very softly. But so intent were they on their work that they never heard me turn about and go back to my bed. Well, this sort of thing went on for some time. One day the King came riding by.

"Cobbler," he called out, "in one of the boots you made me I found a letter saying that my long lost boy was with the elves in the forest. How came that letter in the boot?"

"No sooner had I related all the strange things which had happened, than the King hastened to the forest, where, stranger still, he found his long lost child."

"Gracious me!" gasped the astonished little rabbit. "How very strange and wonderful."

"Yes," murmured the Cobbler, scratching his head. "It seems that his child had wandered from the castle and would have starved had not the kind little men of the wood taken care of him. But, come, little rabbit, I must hasten with the shoes. Now that the leather is cut, I will leave them on the bench for the tiny elves. Maybe they will visit me tonight."

"Ha, ha!" chuckled the bunny boy, anxious for a new adventure. "I shall keep wide awake so as to have a look at these kind little men. Yes, I must not fall asleep." "I cannot promise that they will come," answered the kind cobbler, with a smile at the anxious little rabbit. "But we will hope they have heard that you are traveling through Fairy Bunnyland."

Washington Highlights

By Kirke L. Simpson

Washington.—Woes of the movie stars who have fallen foul of the immigration law and come screaming to Washington for help would fill a very large book. They are many, and the technical cases involved are almost as numerous as the persons.

Rarely does an exact duplicate case put in an appearance. As a general rule, however, the explanation of the individual difficulty is the same; failure, either willfully or thoughtlessly, to comply with some bit of redtape at a previous date.

The movie actor fraternity is frequently in immigration hot water owing to the fact that its members are within the preferred class of "artists" admitted to this country for temporary stay and employment without regard to quota limitations. Six months is the life of an original entry permit of this character, extendable indefinitely, however, six months at a crack. Failure to get those extensions is the slip-up that frequently spells subsequent disaster to plans or hopes. It takes a lot of argument to convince a hard-boiled governmental board that the failure was innocent and inadvertant and not due to a determination to just squat in the United States permanently in defiance of law and regulations.

Comedian's "Tragedy"

One young English-born screen comedian of considerable note, who overstayed himself more than a year and then decided to take a trip home and come back, found the door ready to be slammed in his face when he tried to straighten things out. He came within an ace of being shipped home instantly as a violator of law and only a most persuasive tongue saved him and won him an additional six months' grace. By that time, however, he had built up an earning capacity of a thousand a month or more and grown so fond of the United States that he determined to seek American citizenship.

It was no go, for you can't apply for citizenship unless you enter under a quota visa.

The comedian was in a box. He knew it would take months if not years to get a quota visa if he went back to England and yet his younger brother, drawn over by the movie lad's glowing account of things American, had come by that route and was in process of becoming an American. The comedian barged across the Mexican border and wheedled American consulates all over Mexico for a quota entry status. In vain.

A CHINESE TRICK

Peking. (AP) — The Chinese "fatten" watermelons before taking them to market to sell by the pound. A needle and thread affair, the needle piercing the melon and the thread reaching to a bucket, "siphons" the water to the melon's flesh.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Food Mileage

Fueling the household machine is an important item these days. After all, on the road of daily life, most of us have to get the last mile out of every dollar we spend.

High food mileage means careful buying . . . thoughtful selection of the foods that not only suit the tastes and physical needs of the family, but the pocketbook as well.

That's the value of advertising. Every day, here in your paper, are presented new and interesting food ideas. New ways of preparing old, reliable favorites. New combinations of the foods the family needs . . . in ways they'll like.

Standard, unvarying quality is the outstanding feature of advertised merchandise in general . . . and of food products in particular. Quite a factor in getting high food mileage!

Read the food advertising here in your daily paper . . . it will show you the way to higher food mileage

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

ON GIVING A BOOK

I WAS talking recently with a friend who told me many wonderful things about a famous man whom I have loved and admired for many years.

I listened to the story of his life as it had been revealed over the years to this friend who had known him so well. A story of sacrifice, struggle, disappointment and—large achievements.

When I got to my home I took up the greatest book that this man had written, and as I read I saw a new man—a man who revealed himself as he revealed the beauty and greatness of another.

The next day I got this book for my friend. And I am sure that I have gained a greater happiness and joy, from this giving back in the form of a book, to the one who had newly revealed the man who lived it as he wrote it.

A book carries so much. We are not always in the mood to talk to our dearest friend, but we always have a mood for some beloved book. Especially if we have cultivated the love of books.

Lincoln, as a boy, always had a book near him, when he could get one, even by walking miles to obtain it. He was always reading or thinking about what he read after he had set his book aside. I have often thought about the service that each one rendered to the world who gave Lincoln a book to read.

Now each one of these books is treasured by those fortunate enough to possess one. Just because this great man once loved it and fingered it—and grew from what it taught or made him think.

Somehow I never feel alone when they seem to sleep.

There is nothing that gives me a greater thrill than to give a book to someone who is able to appreciate and love it. Like introducing a new friend to an old friend.

Washington. (AP) — "Derby Dick" would like to go to the tenth annual reunion of the First Division, A. E. F., in Los Angeles October 18. But he regrets, unfortunately, that he will be detained. It is a matter of further regret to him that he cannot even pay his dues.

Eighteen months he served in the pioneer American division in the world war. He walked with that exaggerated carefulness of the attacker through the blasted woods of France, went through the fighting horror of Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, the Argonne—there are plenty of memories crowding Derby Dick's mind, for he has little to do.

"I received your kind letter with an invitation to attend the reunion next October," he wrote Capt. Henry C. Evans of Baltimore. "I appreciate your kindness. However, I am very sorry to say I will be unable to attend on account of these high gray walls being quite impossible to climb, to say nothing of the many rifles scattered along the top."

Derby Dick has crowned an adventurous life with a long prison sentence. He is in a west coast jail.

His answer to the mimeographed invitation to attend the gathering is regarded as representative of the affection of the thousands of men who served in the division for the old outfit and its commander, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall.

Derby Dick, whose real name is withheld, is a Britisher. For 30 years, he fought under the Union Jack. He was in the Boer war and the Russo-Japanese war, and he served two hitches in the Highlanders. But when America got into the war, he enlisted fraudulently with the Yankees.

First Division officers found out all these things about Derby Dick, as a matter of routine. They found out, too, that he was a good soldier. His troubles after discharge are not known. The mimeographed letter went first to his London, England, address, and finally reached him at the prison.

"I will say this for the boys of the First," he wrote in answer. "Out of 30 years of soldiering, I served about 18 months with the First, but I never wish to have better comrades or better fighters beside me than they. Remember, I was in the mixup from 1914."

"THE SINGING FOOL," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Al Stone, singing waiter at Blackie Joe's New York night club, wins fame as a composer of popular songs. He marries Molly Winter, a ballad singer, and makes her famous, too. When their baby, Junior, is about two years old, Molly elopes with John Perry, Al's best friend, taking the child. A week later Al learns she is at a New York hotel, ready to sail for France that afternoon. He calls her on the phone, and begs for the chance to say good-bye to Junior. Molly consents, so Junior is taken to the park entrance. It is a tragic farewell, for Al adores his boy. Junior says, "Do you feel bad, daddy?"

CHAPTER XX

"I'm all right, Junior," said Al. "No, I don't feel bad. I'm just awfully happy to see you. I'll tell you something—you're going far away to another place on a great big boat. Take care of mother and don't let anything happen to her. Be good to her. And remember—you'll see daddy again; we must both wait for that time."

In the distance the nurse-maid was consulting the chauffeur as to the time. He looked at his watch and decided they should be getting back to the hotel. Al looked up to see the severe-faced nurse standing before him.

"I'm sorry," she said firmly, "but it's time for the young gentleman to return to his mother."

Junior turned on her quickly.

"But I don't want to go."

The nurse tried to smile, but Junior continued with baby sternness.

"If you take me away so soon I won't like you."

Al rose, gathering Junior in his arms. "Sh-h—Junior. It isn't nurse's fault that you have to go. You must be good boy, every way, every day."

Then Al turned to the nurse. "I'll bring him over to the car. Will you please go on ahead?"

The nurse preceded them, while Al made that one hundred-foot walk to the car last as long as possible.

Would this really be the last time he ever saw Junior? Perhaps not, but it was quite possible that Junior would be a strapping youngster the next time they came together.

If so his adorable baby sayings and his sense of baby gaiety would be gone. His sweet, confiding ways would be replaced by a boyish self-sufficiency. He might even forget his father entirely.

These thoughts traveled like burning darts through Al's mind. Was it humanly possible for him to give up this little bundle of humanity? Could he live afterward? And then came the thought—take Junior by force, jump into a taxi and drive off with him. For a moment this idea persisted with startling intensity. It would be so easy, and he would be justified in doing it!

But, no, Al just couldn't do it—he wasn't made that way. He was kind, generous, chivalrous. He loved Molly in spite of what she had done to him and he knew she adored Junior. No matter how Molly had hurt him, Al's nature would not let him pay her back in kind. Let Junior go with her and perhaps she would relent and return with the child within a few months. He knew she would take good care of his son.

Al kept his facial muscles firm and controlled until the instant of saying good-bye and putting Junior into the car. Then he had to turn his face away again as he pressed Junior to him. He said haltingly: "Don't forget, Junior, your mother loves you—you're going to be aw-

Even the strange nurse was touched by this father's tragic face. Then Al, afraid of breaking openly, quickly passed Junior to her in the car. The motor purred, the door closed, the Rolls-Royce started to move. Al saw Junior's face, dim in the limousine's interior, gazing at him in wide-eyed, troubled wonder.

Al was smiling. It was a desperate effort, but Junior must remember him that way. As the car gained momentum the baby face appeared at the rear window; Junior was waving a frantic farewell. Al started to walk after the car—faster, faster. Now he broke into a run. His heart was breaking, but still he smiled and answered Junior's wave. He stumbled and almost fell, then caught himself up and ran the faster. But the little face at the window became blurred by the intervening distance and suddenly the car itself disappeared down the crowded Avenue.

When Al definitely lost sight of the car he stopped in his tracks. People on all sides were staring at him, conscious that he was passing through a terrible ordeal of some kind. As long as Junior was in sight he had kept up a brave front; now his figure sagged, his strength suddenly left him, and he stumbled blindly toward the nearest bench.

He sat with his arm flung across the top of the bench and his head in his arms. He felt that he could not bear to face the life that moved around him, so steadily and relentlessly, a law unto itself and ignoring his despair. He heard the steady hum of the motor cars up and down the Avenue, carrying women home from shopping tours, bridge parties and tea dates, carrying men home from offices. Faintly he heard the footsteps of the pedestrians who passed only a few feet away.

Many curious glances were directed his way. If he had been a down-at-the-heels derelict of the great city he could have sat for hours in that position without attracting any notice at all, but it was unusual to see a fashionably dressed young man, with a silver-topped walking stick across his lap sitting on a bench just outside the park's stone wall in a posture suggesting despair. Two girls, passing close by, giggled, believing Al drunk. But when he raised his eyes and stared at them vaguely they relapsed into silence and hurried away.

Finally he stood up and turned back toward the bench where he had sat with Junior. Reaching it, he stepped close and touched it. He must always remember this bench, the scene of his good-bye to Junior. He took note of the fact that it stood beside a small, bare oak tree with a curiously gnarled trunk.

The winter day was darkening already; nurses from the fashionable houses along the Avenue were bringing home their baby charges who had been playing all afternoon in the park. There was a procession of them—babies in perambulators, little tots of two, three and four, carried in their nurses' arms or trotting along beside the women. Many were dressed similarly to Junior, some looked very like him. And Al stood, slightly away from the sidewalk, peering eagerly into the little faces, listening to the chatter and childish laughter. These youngsters—they were going home to happy nurseries, to fathers and mothers who loved them and were united.

How uncanny it was, thought Al, that this procession of babies passed him just at this time, when he had lost Junior. He stood like a statue until long after the last youngster had disappeared and the last remonstrating tone of the chattering French nurses had died away. Then he turned south toward the city's skyscrapers, already ablaze with light in the distance. Skyscraper apartments—homes—reaching into the cold blue winter evening sky! Everything he saw brought comparisons emphasizing the pain of his loss.

He walked slowly, asking himself—Where was he going? Back to the apartment where Celeste, the maid, waited with plying eyes, back to Junior's nursery? No, he couldn't do that. He must tell Celeste tomorrow that he was giving up the apartment. He would go to a hotel to live.

But what were his plans? He must have plans, something to engage his interest, or he would go crazy with the pain of his loss. That was Al's big problem at the moment, and he knew it. Without plans he would be continually whirling in an emotional chaos.

He had plenty of money—that didn't worry him. And he knew that Molly had salted away everything she had earned as a revue singer. She was amply able to provide for Junior. Besides, John Perry had made himself rich as a horse racketeer. No, the money angle could be set aside.

A Retired Man of Orchard Way Praises Collier's Old Herbs

After Trying Many Remedies For His Rheumatism, Collier's Old Herbs Only Medicine That Gave Him Permanent Relief.

"I suffered poor health for years and always complained about one thing or another. My liver gave me a lot of trouble, I also, had dizzy spells and in the morning when I got out of bed I would have to sit down for a while as my head would twirl around like a top."

COLLIER'S OLD HERBS

This was the statement of Mr. W. J. Cannon, who lives at Orchard Way, R. D. No. 7, Box 265, to the Old Herb Man recently.

Continuing Mr. Cannon said: "But my worst suffering came from rheumatism which settled in my arms and shoulders. My right arm especially was almost paralyzed from pain. I couldn't bear to move it. My nerves was completely unstrung and I would shake all over. I was in such a terrible crippled up condition that I felt like a man 100 years old."

"But I heard so many people talk about Collier's Old Herbs and read testimonials from people that I knew that I at least decided to give it a trial, and I want to say that it quickly relieved me of all of my suffering, and it was hard to believe that I was the same man after I had taken only a few bottles of this wonderful medicine. I am now free of all misery and my whole system is in better condition than it has been for years. I heartily endorse this wonderful medicine—Collier's Old Herbs."

The Old Herb Man is at People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa., where he is daily explaining the merits of this wonderful medicine. Free samples given.

Collier's Old Herbs is sold in Emmitsburg, Md., by Houser's Drug Store; in Taneytown, Md., by Robert S. McKinney; in Hanover by Baughman's Drug Store—adv.
